

Questions For Your Next Veterinary Visit

Because of the many potential causes of GI upset, a visit to your veterinarian is the best course of action. Be prepared to answer the following questions, and ask your veterinarian if a probiotic, like Forti Flora, might help.

1. Have you noticed any of the following changes in your pet over the last 10 days?

- Diarrhea
- Vomiting
- Lethargy
- Increased flatulence (gas)
- Soft stools
- Blood in stool

2. Have you noticed that your pet is less active?

- Yes, my pet is very lethargic
- Yes, my pet seems less active than normal
- I am not sure
- No, I have not noticed a change in activity level

3. Has your pet eaten anything atypical? Please list. (eaten from the trash bin, yard, plants, etc.)

4. Is your pet currently on any medications or antibiotics? Please list.

5. Have you changed your pet's diet over the past 30 days? Does your pet eat table scraps or human food? Please list any new foods or table scraps.

6. Has your pet's routine or environment changed over the past 30 days? Please elaborate. (travel, boarding at kennel, new family member, house guest, etc.)